We Treat Even With Satan

IN PLACES here and there, some of these places being not far away, there has sprung up a tendency to kick President Roosevelt in the ribs because of his alleged mismanagement of diplomatic matters. Fault, serious fault, is found with him because he has deemed it expedient to seek support of the Pope of Rome in his all-out efforts to defeat Hitler. Those who voice these protests are offered because they personally recognize the Pope's religion as entirely unworthy and he is an enemy of Satan. This protest seems to mean that those who protest would rather the struggle should be lost to Hitler than won through co-operation with the devil.

Personally we have been taught from infancy to consider the devil as a very undesirable element—one who needs to be told where to get off; and we've jotted down in our book some right severe things we'd say to him some time when and if he suddenly came upon him and found him sitting on his tail and his hands tied behind him. By which we are saying that in ordinary circumstances we are opposed to any sort of truck with Satan or his emissaries.

But this matter is different. The late Sam Jones lived at a time when people in Georgia had enough religion to seek to forbid the running of passenger trains on Sunday. Sam rode on a Sunday train once and a friend chided him. He replied: "I opposed to Sunday trains, so am I opposed to the devil, but if I find the devil going my way on Sunday, I'd ride him to my meeting house."

We'd like for our protestants friends to keep quiet while till we find out if the Pope can be induced to go our way. We can take up the battle-stone again as soon as the war is over.

We'd Give Back The Candy.

MANY THINGS today are just too pretty to resist. Oftener than otherwise we fall for temptations which bring back memories that plague us. Ah, that memory! If we could only keep it in control—steadfastly anchored to the incidents of the past which bring pleasure, and clear of those petty little annoyances which we'd like to stay buried.

At our favorite grocery store, Saturday there was a beautiful assortment of articles arranged to catch the eye and bring a sale. Among the articles shown was a five-cent package of peppermint stick candy wrapped in cellophane. The wrapping was itself designed as a trap—it magnified the rich beauty of the candy. We bought it, and walked down the street.

And memory broke loose from its moorings and began to float around in the etherial past. Like a butterfly seeking sweet nectar (or a bumblebee about to sting) it flitted from here to yonder until it brought us back to another little package of peppermint candy which crossed our path more than a half century ago—and which we've wished a thousand times we might get ourselves set straight about. It's too late now, perhaps; but maybe it is not, for within our wide circle of readers there may be someone who will carry this message: We didn't take all that candy intentionally, and we are sorry for our mistake.

Old Mrs. Meigs had lived near our boyhood home in our early memory, she and her husband and their son and his wife and children. Alex Meigs was the son just arrived at manhood, and there were two small boys in his home. The family moved away and they were gone maybe for two or three years—perhaps longer. Then they came back to their old home to live again. There were no railroads on which to ride nearer than Cedar Keys, a hundred miles away. Our father operated a sailboat between home and that port and carried passengers as well as freight. The Meigs rode back to Cedarwater on his boat from Cedar Key.

There was no pier or landing place for passengers—they must needs be unloaded from the sailboat into a scowboat, thence carried to shallow water and transferred into a horse-drawn cart, thence to land. That cart was drawn by "Old Fanny," and this writer, then certainly not over ten, rode upon her back. As the Meigs were being loaded into the cart, the elder Mrs. Meigs, thoughtful and generous, held a bag of peppermint candy in her hand. She gave a stick to each of the children, toward them extended the package toward the boy on the horse. "Won't you have some?" There was so little that it did not appear instantly that a division was intended. The boy took the package and expressed thanks. Two minutes later it dawned upon his slow mind that one stick expected to have taken only one stick of candy instead of the three. But he was too late. He blushed and hung his head as he realized that he had erred, and that old Mrs. Meigs had adjudged him greedy and thoughtless. He is saying now, what he has said in his mind a thousand times since that incident, that it was not his intention to take the last stick of candy from that generous old lady.

That was more than sixty years ago. She was then an old woman, and we are sure she has gone hence perhaps a half century. Maybe the little boys whose candy we had shared are still living; maybe they remember our apparent greed. We'd like to apologize to that old lady; we'd like to have ourselves set straight with those boys.

If they have all gone hence, and some of our readers come upon them in their future wanderings in space, we are asking this apology be transmitted. That is our only hope of being set straight before we shall some day meet her face to face.

We wonder how often since then we have been rash enough to wrongfully accuse a person of misdoing whose intentions were so innocent!

Ah, if we could only control our memory in pleasant paths! But we still love peppermint candy.

Need Personal Integrity

NEVER has the need been greater than now for personal integrity. Individuals are mere units of government. If the units have broken down, little wonder that the functions of government shall fail. Since individual uprightness or lack of it is reflected in governmental activities, therefore it is our duty to correct personal weaknesses; yet it must be recognized that a questionable trend once taken will continue beyond the danger point unless there be strong individuals willing to stand in their places and cry out against the threatened evils.

This matter of relief for the needy, purely philanthropic in its inception, has become a political activity, carries the possibility of great evil. When men and women in private walks of life are encouraged to devise ways by which they may escape the responsibilities which are theirs by personal inheritance, and place their personal responsibilities upon others to whom they do not morally belong, it is time to check up carefully and face about.

There is little difference in the vicinity of the small grifter who is content to reap small personal benefits at the expense of others, and in the offshooter who feels justified in using his power to reap personal profit at public expense. The crook in high places is a justification and example to the crook in low places. They belong in the same class in so far as their integrity is concerned.

And this brings us back to repeat, never has the need been greater than now for personal integrity. With this basis, we are impelled to call attention to a worthy example from a neighboring state. Read the Associated Press story:

"Mrs. Cornelia Spearman Chase, age 68, refused to accept a pension payment of $1,060 from the state of Louisiana as the widow of a soldier of the Confederacy. This payment had been attempted by check. Mrs. Chase being one of the many whose pensions had been in arrears because of the looting of the state treasury by the plunder band of Huey Long who in 1930 passed away, my friends urged me to accept the pension as I had heavy responsibilities to meet. They have all been met because I went to work. Please have the money used in some worthy way, and accept my thanks."

BAND TO PLAY
The Statesboro High School band will make their first fall appearance for passengers—they must needs be unloaded from the sailboat into a scowboat, thence carried to shallow water and transferred into a horse-drawn cart, thence to land. That cart was drawn by "Old Fanny," and

LARGEST CHECK DRAWN FOR TOBACCO GROWER

D. A. Burney, at the Jackson Hotel, this week is showing his friends a photostatic copy of a check believed to be the largest check ever issued to an individual grower in payment for tobacco. The photo was sent him by Jack Hurrey, who is connected with the federal bureau in the market at Greenville, N. C., and was for an amount slightly in excess of thirty-five thousand dollars. It was given in payment for a lot of more than 104,000 pounds, which sold for an average in excess of 34 cents per pound.

MAMMOTH STALK CANE PRESENTED TO EDITOR
In answer to the lament that sugar cane cannot be grown today like it was in days of old, D. A. Edensfield, Hagan district subscriber, presented the editor Tuesday with a stalk which measured approximately eight feet in length and was as pretty as eye ever looked upon. Mr. Edensfield stated that it was taken from his quarter-acre patch, from which he has been supplying the local markets.

POPULAR SALESMAN RETURNS TO OLD JOB
Friends of W. W. Sapp, and they are legion among those who have been buying groceries in Statesboro for the past five years, will be interested to learn that he has returned to his old place as sales manager for the Sims store on West Main street, which position he held until recent months. Mr. Sapp is one who has grown in popularity through his zealous attention to the interests of his patrons who call upon him for service. No man has more friends.

GOOD WILL CENTER TO MOVE NEXT MONDAY
Announcement is requested that the Good Will Center, operated since its establishment more than a year ago on West Main street, will move next Monday to the Guards Armory, which move will make it vastly more convenient to those who have business with it when they come to town.

PORTAL CHAPTER NEWS
The members of the Portal chapter of the FFA, desiring to have a part in the defense of our country, have decided to save their money for the purpose of buying United States Defense Stamps. Each person brings in the amount he wants to put in. He buys his stamps and puts them in the book. Members of the chapter have several dollars in this fund. L. A. BRANNEN, Reporter.

St. Paul's Church
The fourth quarterly conference of the Bulloch circuit will be held at St. Paul Methodist church, located fifteen miles northeast of Statesboro, on Monday, September 24. The pastor, James R. Webb, superintendent of the Savannah district will be there to preach at the 11:30 hour. Dinner will be served on the grounds. The business conference will be held after lunch, presided over by Bro. Webb. The pastor will preach at the 3 o'clock service. Everyone is cordially invited. OLIVER B. THOMAS, Pastor.

OCTETTE CLUB
Mrs. J. S. Murray was charming hostess to her bridge club Wednesday at her home on Fair road. For high score Mrs. B. B. Morris received a pair of pillow cases, and personal guest towels were won by Mrs. Jim Moore for cut. A salad course was served, and other guests were Mrs. Billy Cline, Mrs. C. B. Mathews, Mrs. Luff DeLoach, Mrs. Howard Christian, Mrs. E. M. Akins and Mrs. E. L. Barnes.

Georgia's Greatest Power Plant Joins The Army of Production

ADDITION 100,000 horsepower of electrical energy, producing 1,500,000 kilowatt hours a day. Plant Atkinson's new second unit has gone into service, taking its place in the ranks of the nation's Army of Production.

Plant Atkinson, now doubled in size, now having a capacity of 200,000 horsepower, with ability to produce a total of 3,000,000 kilowatt hours daily, is Georgia's largest electric generating plant—almost twice as large as the Tallulah Falls hydroelectric plant. With steam as its motive power, Atkinson operates without regard to weather; its doubled capacity is new protection against power shortage during droughts.

The greater Plant Atkinson is part of our answer to the nation's urgent demand for power, and more power, to meet the needs of national defense, as well as Georgia's peacetime needs. And other important steps are being taken to give Georgia an increased power supply.

In June, an entirely new generating plant, also operated by steam, was completed and put into service near Macon. Plant Arkwright is its name, and its 60,000 horsepower generator can turn out 1,500 tons a day.

Two turbine-generator units are as big as boxcars, yet as finely adjusted as a watch. The rotating part of each unit weighs 90 tons, revolving 1,800 times a minute. The outer edge of the largest turbine wheel travels 770 miles per hour!

When both units are operating with coal, they use 1,500 tons a day.
